New Palestinian Role Complicates Kissinger's Mission

A View From Beirut

angry reaction and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's bandwringing over the Arab summit's decision to back a Palestinian state under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization have largely obscured the true meaning of the decision.

Put in its simplest form. it means that Yassir Arafat and the pragmatic wing of the PLO have committed themselves to seek some form of negotiation and eventual coexistence with the

These propositions would have been denounced as political heresy by Mr. Arafat and his followers only a year ago. For-tunately for Mr. Arafat, their implicit acceptance at Rabat has been overshadowed by Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin's portrayal of the decision as "a threat," and Mr. Kissinger's apparent discomfort over the broad Arab endorsement of a new Palestinian

> Members of the Palestinian inner circle make it clear that their objective remains the establishment of one "democratic secular state" to which Palestinian refugees could return. It would group Moslems. Jews and Christians, and put an end to Israel's religious exclusivity.

For the Israelis, the phrase "democratic secular state." continues to be a code slozan for the eventual destruction of Israel. Mr. Rabin's warning to the Knesset this week, that the Arab summit decision had brought war closer, made it clear that Israel does not accept the notion that the Palestinians are prepared to make the transformation from guerrilla warfare to peaceful political competition.

The decision has also complicated Mr. Kissinger's peace effort, which he has based on a step-by-step" approach in which each side gains confidence in the other through pegotieting on minor issues before tackling more intractable problems.

JERUSALEM, NOV. 8 (NYT) .-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's talks in Israel yesterday and today come at a crucial point in the U.S. mediation efforts, with Arab and Israeli leaders agreed that unless some political breakthrough is achieved, a new round of fighting is all but inevitable in the next six to 12

This mutual foreboding emerged from a two-week journey by this correspondent through the area that included stops on both sides of the political fence. The one thing on which both sides agreed was the view that there will probably be war unless some political breakthrough is achiev-

Pesaimism is the prevailing mood in the Middle East as Mr. Kissinger continues his latest effort. It is rooted in the perception that Israel and the Arab states are seeking—with equal determination exactly opposite results from the current negotiat-

Israel is seeking a fundamental change in the nature of its political relationship with its neighbors, especially Egypt. In exchange for any further withdrawals, it wants tangible evidence-in the form of indirect trade or communication or tourism—that a genuinely new era has begun in which its right to exist in peace in the area is acknowledged at least implicitly.

The Arab states have no such concessions in mind. Their goal is to force Israel back to the pre-1967 boundaries by whatever combination of military, political and economic pressure proves necessary. They seem fully prepared to carry that campaign to the point of another war and equally prepared to use ofl as a

Neither side seems unduly alarmed by the prospect of a fifth Middle East war. There may be a measure of fatalism involved, but both sides apparently believe that something can be gained from another round.

The Israelis think they can restore the undisputed military superiority they enjoyed prior to the hard-fought war in October, 1973, while the Arabs feel that they can demonstrate that the October war was no accident and that time is on their side.

The Rabat conference of Arab leaders injected a new note of militancy into the already supercharged atmosphere. charged atmosphere. This is usually the case with full-dress Arab summit conferences, but it was especially striking this year when even the more moderate leaders such as King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt quickly gave in to the demands of the Pales-(Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Limiting Their Exports

Big Grain Nations Eye A Famine-Relief Plan

By Clyde H. Farnsworth

ROME, Nov. 8 (NYT).—Major grain-producing nations—including the United States, the Soviet Union and China—have agreed to consider a program to limit their foreign sales in an effort to free grain supplies for emergency aid to hungry people.

American sources said a secret meeting of the producing na-tions had been held here yesterday, bringing China and the Soviet Union together for the first time to discuss cooperative action for dealing with the world

The nations attending the meeting discussed the mechanics of the proposed program of emergency aid for the 500 mil-lion people facing starvation or malnutrition in the next eight months, the sources said.

The move represented a major breakthrough at this conference of 130 nations gathered to organize systems for increasing food production and building stockpiles to insure, as Secretary of State Henry Kissinger put it, that with-in a decade "no child will go to bed hungry.

Bich and Poor

Policy differences between rich and poor countries led to procedural delays at the conference that threatened to put off the start of mobilization efforts in the war against hunger.

AH Boerma of the Netherlands, director-general of the UN Food and Agricultural Organization, who feared that the conference would drift from its objectives because of bickering, organized the meeting of the producing states to deal with the problems of the critical eight months coming up.

He produced a paper for the heads of the delegations of the United States, the Soviet Union, China, the European Economic Community, Canada, Australia and Argentina showing the latest FAO estimates as of Oct. 15 of the grain shortege facing countries mainly in south Asia and sub-Saharan Africa.

Up to 11 Million Tons Short The total shortfall in those countries ranges from 7 million prices of roughly $200 a ton, the value of the grain that is needed is some $2 billion.

Mr. Boerma broke down the needs as follows: India, 3.4 million to 7.4 million tons; Bangla-desh, 1.9 million; Sri Lanka, 200,600, Tanzania, 500,000, Pakistan, 1 million, and for 20 more countries, mainly in Africa, 1.3 million tons altogether.

The reason for the wide gap in estimates for India is that officials in New Delhi have been reluctant to acknowledge the magnitude of their difficulties, Information on exactly what occurred at yesterday's meeting was sparse. Some participants refused all comment.

China Self-Sufficient

China was represented by the head of its delegation. Hao Chungshih, the agriculture minister, who said at a plenary session of the conference today that his country had become self-sufficient.

Senators for More Aid

ROME, Nov. 8 (UPI).—Four senators on the U.S. delegations to the conference have called on President Ford to give the con-ference a pledge of an additional million tons of food for the current fiscal year.

Delegation sources said Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz agreed at a delegation meeting last night to send a telegram to Mr. Ford asking him to consider the bipartisan request to raise U.S. food aid to 4.3 million tons in the 1974-75 fiscal year.

Mr. Kissinger, in his keynote speech Tuesday, proposed a fivepoint program to fight hunger, including an internationally co-ordinated grain reserve, but both he and Mr. Butz stopped short of making a firm U.S. pledge of im-"Our contribution to solving mediate emergency food aid.

Gold Price Soars to Record At $183 an Ounce in London

LONDON, Nov. 8 (IHT).-The price of gold soared to a record $183 an ounce when bullion dealers set the price here this afternoon and by the end of the day's busy trading the metal had broken that record firing-level and was being offered for sale at $186,

The previous record level at the fixing was set on April 3, when the price rose to $179.50. This morning, London dealers set gold's level at $177.50.

In the other principal bullion-dealing center, Zurich, gold closed at a selling price of $178.50, up $1 from yesterday's close.

One dealer said buying pressure was "consistent and very strong."

Another called the market busy

Another factor, dealers said, was the action of the U.S. Congress which will allow Americans to buy and sell gold for the first time in 41 years, beginning on Jan. 1. This is expected to increase demand for gold as an investment.

One dealer here predicted that gold would climb to perhaps $189 an ounce before easing back in profit-taking. Another forecast a price of $200 an ounce before

Gold optimists base this view partly on the argument that able to hold the line forever against a revaluation of the official price of gold, now $42.22 an

The official price once was the key to the international monetary system. The United States promised to buy gold at $35 an ounce and the value of all paper currencies was based in turn on their relation to the dollar.

But former President Richard Nixon suspended the dollar-gold link in August, 1971, and the monetary system has never been the same since.

The United States devalued the dollar twice, raising the official gold price first to $38 and then $42.22 an ounce. Currencies began to float outside fixed exchange rates and gold was traded on "free markets" according to supply and demand, rising eventually to today's record level. The official price no longer has anything more than a bookkeepimg value.

. Even government central banks are no longer committed to trad-ing gold at the far lower official price. After prolonged debate, financial authorities decided to let government banks trade their gold on the free market at the far higher prices, Gold optimists believe the soar-ing free-market price will eventually force an upward revalua-tion of the official price, and that this in turn will trigger another boost in the free-market price. Figures up to $300 an ounce have been mentioned

Banzer Appears To Be in Control

LA PAZ, Nov. 8 (UPI) -- President Hugo Banzer appeared today to have regained full control of the country in a brief but violent battle yesterday against rebellious elements he called "a group of good-for-nothing drug addicts and drunks.".

Censorship was lifted as government forces, using jets, tanks and paratroops, carried out mopping-up operations against diehard rebels. Gen. Banzer took personal command of his troops after the attempted coup was launched yesterday in the city of Santa Cruz,

The number of casualties was not known. An official spokesman said there were "several casualties . . . dead and wounded." The official radio station in La Paz said the fighting caused casualties and that "a number" of rebels were seized.

his top aides believed the situation in the Middle East was not so grave as many had feared in wake of the Rabat decision A top Kissinger side insisted that a diplomatic impasse between Israel and the Arab states had been averted for the time being, that the Arabs and Israel were less tense than a week ago and the possibility of negotiations re-mained open. "And everyone agrees the U.S. effort should continue," he said.

Optimistic Appraisal This generally optimistic appraisal was consistent with Mr.

Rissinger's own point of view given over the few weeks since he began to receive reports from Arab and Israeli leaders. But aboard Mr. Kissinger's plane, newsmen were also told that there was no certainty that the secretary's latest effort will prove successful, given the large gap that separates Egyptian and Israeli perceptions of the next stage of the Sinai negotiations. Moreover, Mr. Kissinger seems to want to keep alive the possibility of a negotiated settlement for the West Bank of the Jordan River, even though the Rabat conference has, at least for the foreseeable future, made such talks unlikely by giving the responsibility for negotiations to the Palestine Liberation Organization and not to Jordan.

The Israelis, who might reluctantly have negotiated with Jordan's King Hussein, refuse to deal with the PLO. which they regard as dedicated to Israel's destruction. Mr. Kissinger seems to believe that over an extended period. if Israel and the PLO do not engage in negotiations. Arab states might come up with another formula which might include Jordan's re-emergence as a major factor. This view is not shared by all experts, however. On previous Middle Bast visits. newsmen were given a fairly thorough rundown of Mr. Kissinger's negotiating tactics and strategy. But today, they were given no details on how or when Mr. Kissinger intends to deal with the "possibilities" he cited in Tel Aviv before he left for

Instead, Mr. Kissinger and his aides said that they simply could not go into the substance on what was ahead because of a need to maintain a low-key, secret diplomacy to meet the sensitivities of various leaders. They cited the position of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who may be reluctant to deal openly with the Israelis at this time, given the radical mood in the Arab world following the Rabat conference. But Mr. Sadat, nevertheless, publicly indicated support for Mr. Kissinger's step-by-step approach to negotiations in a news conference in Cairo on Wednesday. King Faisal of Saudi Arabia also supports Mr. Kissinger's efforts. Some Israeli officials said they believed that Mr. Kissinger would return to the Middle East next month, but newsmen were told that there were no such plans at BELFAST, Nov. 8 (UPD .- British soldiers today killed a suspected hijacker during a day of violence, protest marches and strikes linked to the death of an ex-tremist shot during a jailbreak attempt two nights ago.

An army spokesman said that the man was shot after he aimed a pistol at a military patrol approaching to investigate reports of a hijacking Despite his injury, the man again aimed at soldiers and was shot a second time. He was dead on arrival at a local hospital the spokesman said.

The shooting took place in one of several West Beliast Catholic communities where gangs of youths with clubs and pistols roamed the streets this morning and forced shopkeepers to close for the day.

He asked the council to "accept this factual situation. Representation in the white Parliament is not the only way in which you can realize your political and other aspirations."

A Costa Rican government spokesman warned that if the effort to lift the blockade fails, several more countries would soon rescind the sanctions on their own "and this would he to the further detriment of the inter-American system."
Advocates of the lifting of sanctions maintain that n vote to enc the blockade would not constitute recognition of the Cuban regime by the OAS, nor would it necessarily pave the way for a return by Havana to membership in the organization. Mr. Castro has repeatedly denied any interest in reigining the OAS, which he has attacked in the past as an instrument of U.S. policy. The Cuban Premier has suggested instead that Latin American nations hand together in a new regional organization that would exclude Washington.

Mr. Wertheimer, who directs the campaign-monitoring project of Common Cause, a citizens' lobby, cited the following examples in a phone interview on the basis of the semifinal financing reports in Senate races:

· Out of 30 winners who had opposition, 28 raised more money than the candidates they defeat-The exceptions were Sen. Cook lost. As noted, so did Colorado's Sen. Dominick, although he extensive his size. though he outdrew his rival. The race between North Dakota's Sen.  Eighteen of the 30 races were won with at least 55 per cent of the vote. In these races winners raised $8.2 million and losers $3.1 million. But in 12 "close" races, in which winners got less than 55 per cent of the votes, the gap was narrower—$6.1 million for winners, $3.2 million for

How much of a given candidate's contributions actually was spent is uncertain. Under the current election law, neither contributions of under $5,000 nor any expenses must be reported by a candidate if the money comes in or goes out after the closing date for the final pre-election report -which this year was Oct, 24.

U.S. Energy Appointee's Link To Oil Firm Surprises Ford

By Edward Cowan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 (NYT). nominated by the White House The White House indicated yesterday that President Ford may be having second thoughts about his intention to nominate Andrew Gibson to head the Federal Energy Administration.

Ronald Nessen, the press sec-retary, obliquely confirmed that Mr. Ford and his staff did not know on Oct. 29, the day the President announced his selection of Mr. Gibson as energy administrator, that Mr. Gibson had a $1-million 10-year severance contract with a company that operates oil tankers and is half-owned by a large oil com-

Later another White House official confirmed that the Presi-dent had not known of the arrangement at the time of the announcement. "We've never looket this se the official said, "but we will." He said that, so far, the President stood behind Mr. Gibson, but that he might yet decide not to send the nomination to the Senate for confirmation. In an interview at the FEA offices Mr. Gibson said that the contract paid him $88,000 a year.

At His Initiative The interview, arranged at Mr. Gibson's initiative, lasted about 75 minutes and was held in the office of the agency's deputy administrator, a post that has been vacant for six months. Also present was Robert Nipp of the agency's Public Affairs Office. The interview ended about a half-hour before a New York Times report triggered questions at the daily White House press briefing about Mr. Gibson's business affiliations. Mr. Gibson, if confirmed by the Senate, would succeed John Sawhill. Mr. Nessen originally said that Mr. Ford knew about Mr. Gibson's background, but later reconvened the briefing to say: Because of the urgency of naming a replacement for John Sawhill, the usual background checks were waived. Before the nomination is sent to the Senate. these checks will be completed." last two Republicans in the legislature were both defeated.

Before this election there were only 20 states in which Republicans dominated either or both branches of the legislatures. In 10 of those states, including New York, Republicans lost control of one branch, and in necticut, Illinois and Iowa they lost control of both.

That wide swing, roughly matching the Democratic sweep in congressional races, was viewed by experts today as typical for state legislatures, where results tend to follow big trends,

Youth and Reform

But in many states there were "reformers" that could be more significant than the simple numbers of Democrats elected. The shift of just a few legislative seats could change the whole tone and direction of politics in a variety of state capitals.

In Harrisburg, Pa., for example, a large part of the Repub-licans' campaign against Gov. Milton Shapp, a Democrat, was waged through four investigating committees in the house. But Stanley Kester, a Republi-can representative from Delaware County, who headed the inquiry into Pennsylvania liquor stores was beaten on Tuesday. And the heads of three other committees will lose their chairmanships next year when Democrats organize their new majority. Democrats will also hold a broader majority than before in the Pennsylvania Senate.

"It's safe to say those investigations are over," remarked the governor's chief aid, Dick Doran, savoring Gov. Shapp's reelection with 55 per cent of the vote. "We'll also get our own version of bills that the Republicans bottled up-a state consumers' advocate, a health-cost control bill and an electionreform bill."

In Madison, Wis., an aide to Gov. Patrick Lucey, a Democrat, said of the Assembly results. Not only have we replaced Republicans with Democrats, but we've replaced guys in their 70s with guys in their 30s. And we've knocked out the heart of the reactionary caucus among the Republican legislators." In Springfield, Illinois, Gov. Daniel Walker, a "reform Democrat, was celebrating the end of the Republican majorities that had thwarted him continually for the last two years. Aides predicted enactment next year of a tax exemption on medicine property-tax relief for the elderly, an increase in unemployment compensation and a higher minimum

Beyond Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Wisconsin, Democrats captured a single Republican-held branch of the legislature in each of the following states: Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Indiana, Maine and Utah. Republicans continue to hold both branches of their state legislatures only in Idaho, Kansas. New Hampshire, North Dakota, Vermont and Wyoming.

They will continue to control one house of the legislature in Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, De ware, Indiana, Maine, New York

THE SEIKO QUARTZ IS CHANGING THE WORLD'S STANDARD OF ACCURACY.

It's at least four times more accurate than any other type of wristwatch.

The Seiko Quartz has no mainspring, no balance wheel, no alloy tuning fork. Instead, the time is kept by a tiny goldcoated quartz crystal which is vacuumsealed in a capsule. It oscillates at exactly 16,384 times a second. (In comparison, an alloy tuning fork averages only 360 oscillations a second.) Its accuracy you can see as the second hand moves in a precise one step motion every single second. That's why the Seiko Quartz is accurate, not just within seconds per day or per week, but within seconds per month. Depending on the model you choose (and Seiko has the biggest selection of quartz watches) the Seiks Quartz is from 4 to 60 times more accurate than any other type of wristwatch. It's what you'd expect from the people who sold the first quartz watch and who sell more than anybody else SEIKO

Inter-American Blueprint

Former Ambassador Sol Linowitz has produced a report that could vastly improve U.S. relations with Latin America if carried out by the administration and Congress. Tha great virtue of this effort is that it substitutes specific recommendations-33 in allfor the highflown rhetoric that has characterized too many previous U.S. initiatives in the hemisphere.

The recommendation that commanded the most attention, because it will be put to an immediate test at a meeting of the Organization of American States foreign ministers in Ecuador, is the call for an end to the 14-year attempt to isolate Cuba in the Americas. The commission urges Washington to seek "a more normal" relationship with the Castro regime, to end its own embargo on trade with Havana, and to be willing, at the meeting that began in Quito on Friday, to support repeal of the sanctions invoked against Cuba by the OAS in 1964.

Repeal may be voted at Quito whatever Washington does; but the commission rightly fears it may be the United States that is isolated in the hemisphere if it maintains the hard-line policy. No miracles should be expected; but it is time to liquidate an ineffective policy and try to ease Cuba's return to a more constructive pattern of inter-American and international relations.

Of comparable importance for improving this country's relations with its hemisphere neighbore is the commission's strong support for a new and long overdue treaty under which jurisdiction over the Panama Canal Zone would eventually pass to the Republic of Panama. It is imperative for the United States to remove what the report calls "one of the last vestiges of big stick diplomacy" under terms that insure uninterrupted use

A privately-funded commission headed by of the canal and a continuing U.S. role in its defense.

In two other areas where decisive policy changes are critically overdue, the commission would ban unilateral U.S. military intervention in Latin America, such as that in the Dominican Republic in 1965, and would end all covert interference in the domestic politics of other American nations such as the activities supported by the CIA in Chile

The commission's recommendations on the more dramatic inter-American problems -Cuba, Panama, covert political interference-should not obscure its detailed suggestions for removing a host of other irritating and self-defeating policies and practices little known to the general public and often the products of special-interest lobbies. It would, for example, eliminate the United States veto over Inter-American Development Bank loans—a frequent target for Latin-American attack-while maintaining the level of America's contributions to the Congress is asked to repeal legislation that tries to mandate economic sanctions in disputes about such matters as fishing rights or the expropriation of North American properties. The report rightly says that these sanctions are usually counterproductive; and it makes the point that the national interest does not automatically coincide with "the perceived interest of an individual firm."

Here, in sum, is a report that clothes practical idealism in common sense. It never loses sight of genuine U.S. interests while ruthlessly pruning away presumed or imaginary or long-outdated interests. It would be hard to produce a better blueprint for the "new era" and "mature partnership" in inter-American relations than Secretary of State Kissinger has promised.

Berlin: Still an Issue

striving in a Moscow visit last week to exact some concessions from Soviet leaders that would reinforce West Germany's vital links with free West Berlin, that city's Mayor Klaus Schütz was making a disturbing disclosure. He had cancelled a visit to Rome because Pope Paul VI had refused to receive him in company with West Germany's ambassador to the Holy Sec.

Why should the Pope take his protocol cue from the Kremlin ou this matter? The answer seems to be that the Vatican is endeavoring to improve the Roman Catholic Church's relations with the Communist-ruled countries of Eastern Europe; and the Soviet Union has let the Holy See—along with governments around the world-know that it objects to public manifestations of ties between West Berlin and West Germany.

Pope Paul's concession to Moscow's wishes is only the latest—though one of the more disturbing—illustrations of the Kremlin's relentiess drive to keep West Berlin as isolated as possible within the four-power Berlin agreement of 1971. Moscow interprets in the narrowest way its promise, in an annex to that pact, to "raise no objection" to Bonn representing West Berlin in international organizations and conferences.

As Leonid Brezhnev made clear almost from the moment of Chancellor Schmidt's

While Chancellor Helmut Schmidt was arrival, Moscow will block wherever possible any implementation of the commitment in that agreement by the United States, Britain and France that ties between West Berlin and West Germany "will be maintained and developed." By being equally tough-minded. Mr. Schmidt was able to budge his hosts slightly on the Berlin Issue,

> The Kremlin maintained its opposition to having West German consulates in Russia and Eastern Europe represent West Berlin legal institutions. And a set of agreements for cultural, scientific, technological and tourist exchanges was held up because Moscow would not extend them to West Berlin. But Mr. Schmidt did get agreement that West Berlin would participate in a long-term economic cooperation pact and would receive power from a nuclear plant West Germany will build for Russia at Kaliningrad.

> As the Vatican incident and the initial Soviet intransigence toward Mr. Schmidt demonstrate all over again, constant vigilance by the West is imperative for the survival of West Berlin in freedom. Moscow's urgent need for large-scale economic assistance from West Germany gives Mr. Schmidt a strong position from which to bargain for additional guarantees. In that effort he deserves full support from his allies, who share Bonn's direct stake in West Berlin's

With those words the respected British journal Nature called on scientists to join-or refute-millions of nonscientists who believe human consciousness has more capabilities for real perception than the five senses.

Last month Nature published a report of experiments at the Electronics and Bioengineering Laboratory of the Stanford Research Institute which concluded that information can be transferred and obtained. in the researcher's words. "by means of an as yet unidentified perceptual modelity." In an accompanying editorial the magazine's editors conceded that this was a "high-risk" paper to publish, partly because one of the test subjects was a performing magician named Uri Gelier, whose reputation is deeply clouded by suspicion of fakery.

But the point of the Stanford experiments was not any alleged clairvoyant ability of Mr. Geller; on the contrary, the authors conclude that "it may be that remote perceptual ability is widely distributed in the general population, but because the perception

The scientific community has been put on is generally below an individual's level of awareness, it is repressed or not noticed." Scientific orthodoxy has grown increasingly remote from the interests and beliefs of a generation of Americans. Apart from the junky "pop-occult" literature, the shelves of any U.S. college bookstore give testimony to the interest in serious but long neglected thinkers from early in the century, like Gurdileff and Ouspensky, up to contemporary writers as diverse as William Irwin Thompson and Carlos Castaneda. The epithet "nonscientific" is no longer a sure ticket to

Perhaps an analogy can be drawn with the reactions of big industry to new energy sources: like unorthodox ideas, these tend to be dismissed for their incompatibility with the existing patterns of investment and thought. The energy industry at least has capital plants and markets to protect; the essence of ecience should be receptivity to new ideas.

The editors of Nature have taken an important step to stimulate scientific discourse. openly posing the issue "whether science has yet developed the competence to confront claims of the paranormal"

But it is typical of Rockefeller that he anticipates these possible problems, not to deplore them, but to act now to avoid them and to be ready with a program to deal with them if they cannot be

His present frustration is that, pending confirmation by the House and Senate as vice-president, he feels like a beached whale, eager to help President Ford in any way the President asks him to help, confident that the problems before the nation are soluble, even excited about presiding over the Senate!--but unable to do anything until sworn into office. And meanwhile even wondering whether it would be all right if he accepted an invitation to the new governors' conference

He agrees, rejuct-antly, that maybe his hand-picked successor as governor of New York, Malcolm Wilson, might have done better if he had followed the progressive Republican line of the Dewey-Rockefeller years in Albany, but he avolds personal blame and puts the election results down to the accumulated frustrations of Vietnam, Water-

Nevertheless, when something so apparently momentous as the hint of a Sino-Soviet nonaggression pact bursts upon a surprised world, at least some cautious

Now a Russian-language broad-cast from China indicates interest in the Kremlin suggestion of a nonaggression treaty—also stating this must be accompanied by mutual withdrawal of armed forces. There have been other signals: deferment of a promised trial of Russian helicopter crewmen seized on Chinese territory and accused of espionage; the closing-down of displays of airby Kosygin last week.

Are these tactical replays of old recordings, or do they imply a new turn in events? Since June, 1970, Brezhnev has been proposing a nonaggression pact. Kosygin endorsed Chou's threepoint formula: (1) Provisional accord until conclusion of "specific talks on boundary questions"; (2) Avoidance of armed clashes and withdrawal of frontier forces; (3) "A new realignment of the boundary which we think would not be a difficult matter to settle." ## Not All Gloom at the White House

WASHINGTON-By midafternoon on election day, Robert Hartmann, the senior man on President Ford's staff, was alternating small cigars with long swigs of blearbonate of sods to settle his churning stomach:

Hartmann, a former news-paperman, went to work for Jerry Ford in 1965, and the elections he saw as a political adviser and speechwriter for the House minority leader were either banner years for the Republicans or the sort of minor disappoints any politician can accept with

The plan, which would cut the six-day workweek by two days, was announced Wednesday in the midst of widespread labor unrest, political uncertainty and general essimism about the economy Reflecting this mood the Madrid stock market reached its lowest point of the year.

The Spanish proposal was labeled at the time, both by the Brit-ish and Gibraltarians, as "totally unacceptable." Britain and Spain for years have been disputing the future of Gibraltar, which Brit-

Under the 1973 plan, Gibraltartans would run their own affairs legislatively and financially. They also would have dual nationality, if they wished, and could exercise either. However, on Spanish soil they would be regarded as Span-turds, on British soil as Britons,

Retired U.K. Surgeon's View

Mercy Killings Called Widespread

By Harry Trimborn

LONDON, Nov. 8.-A retired British surgeon has described the procedure and explained the frequency with which he and other doctors allegedly performed euthanasia—mercy killing—on terminally ill patients at the patients' request.

An hour or so of small talk over a cup of tea. Then, a jab in the arm. Then sleep and, finally, death.

"The whole affair was conducted without fuss and was so civilized," declared the retired surgeon, George Mair. "It was normal. Everyone was doing it."

And despite the fact that it is, as Dr. Mair put it, "completely illegal and totally unethical," there is little trouble with the authorities over euthanasia.

"Death certificates were issued without question," he said, "and there seemed to be no problems with the coroner."

He added: "Euthanasia is widespread, not only in Britain, but all over the world. Only no one wants to talk about it. surgeons have done the same thing, but they are afraid to talk about it for fear of reprisals." Autobiography Out

Dr. Mair made the comments in a telephone interview from his home near Glasgow on the occasion of the publication of his antobiography, "Confessions of a Surgeon."

Now 60, and a lecturer and writer, Dr. Mair was a surgeon and general practitioner in England and his native Scotland from 1939 until his retirement in

A fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Glasgow and Edinburgh, Dr. Mair devotes only six paragraphs in his autobiography to enthanasia. But his comments could possibly get him into trouble with the law.

The controversy about euthanasia flared briefly here last month when a third cousin to Queen Elizabeth II, Mrs. Elizabeth Wise, 38, was placed on 12 months' probation for man-slaughter in the killing of her 9-month-old daughter last June. The child had been afflicted with a disease that severely damaged Medical officials deny that euthanasia is widespread in Brit-

"I haven't heard of a single case by doctors," said Dr. John Leahy Taylor, Secretary of the Medical Protection Society. A spokesman for the British Medical Association agreed.

Law officials say there have not been any prosecutions of doctors accused of enthanasia or, at least, there are no statistics on it.

Yet despite the law against taking human life, through euthanasia or otherwise, Dr. Mair admitted that he performed mercy killings and conceded that many consider such action "mur-

He said it was "impossible" to estimate how many patients he had killed through euthanasia in his long career, but indicated the number was large.

"I am not trying to get off the hook," he said in the interview, "but it is not possible to say how many. And one gets a Freudian blackout on such an unpleasant activity."

In his book, Dr. Mair describes one case of euthanasia that might form the basis of prosecution-the death of a middle-aged woman who, he said, had asked him to kill her. Wracked wito pain, the woman had only a few months to live, he wrote.

"She explained that her house was now in order, her will organized and that she had seen her family and friends while sho was still looking reasonably well. There was nothing left for her to do but die. She wished me to take her into a side room, lay on a certain music from her favorite disk and then, when she

PARIS, NOV. 8 (IHT).—It has been a bleak week at the Hôtel Drouot in Paris. A series of sales has proved that many dealers caught in a cash squeeze. are not about to buy anything unless they are sure they can resell it quickly.

Minor works don't interest them, no matter the merit, for the profit margin is small. On the other hand, better works selling for 100,000 francs or over, seem risky because few are willing to tie up large sums in one work.

On Monday, several auctions were taking place simultaneously, as is the custom in full season. Among them: Yannick Guilloux who was selling silver, and Bernard Oger, who auctioned fur-niture. Neither found the going

For instance, Yannick Guilloux had an elegant, charming étui à cire (sealing-wax case) to offer. Made in Paris in 1760 and weighing 26.5 grams, it was not "important" nor in mint condi-tion (it had been used as a lipstick case). Still, 267 francs wasn't much. A nice chocolatiere (hot chocolate pot), made by Guillaume Vealle in Paris in 1748, weighing 332 grams, sold for 7,183 francs—about what could have been expected.

But one would have expected a higher price for the next lot, consisting of a nice salt cellar

he had no cause for rejoicing. The chairs are rarities as are all pieces of good Italian furniture of the 18th century. The two Italians who bought the chairs were grinning, leaving one in no doubt that, as usual, French underestimation of non-French furniture and objets d'art had helped them acquire a bargain.

In such an atmosphere one would hardly expect pictures to fare better. At Paul Renaud's auction Wednesday of modern paintings including a crayon and white chalk study by Degas as well as many 19th-century academic paintings - prices were down compared with sales last spring. The Degas crayon (27 by 38 centimeters) was a buy at 13,000 francs. Works by Vlaminck flopped. First there was an extremely fine still life of flowers in a vase (38 by 55 centimeters), painted about 1930 according to the catalogue. It sold for 168,000 francs which rather pleased the auctioneer. In the present situa-tion, that was about the most one could hope to get-a fact that merely emphasizes how low expectations have fallen. Another Vlaminck, a good landscape (45 by 54 centimeters) of about tha same period, the catalogue said, fetched 110,500 francs, twice the starting price and therefore ac-ceptable to the auctioneer. But again the price was about 50

Martin's Painting Another flop was work by Henri Martin, the neo-pointillist of the 1920s, a onetime favorite whose paintings fetched between $10,000 and $20,000, sometimes reaching the $40,000 mark or over, when impressionism was in demand in European salesrooms. Wednesday one of Martin's best efforts came up for sale. It showed a peasant sitting by the roadside, in a biaze of golden colors contrasting with his own dark three-quarters silbonette. "3.500 is bid," Renaud said After three bids, Renaud let The only good prices of the day were made by kitsch paintings. There was a grotesque view of a Babylonian palace, based on the 19th-century engravings of excavations at Babylon and Nimrud in northern Iraq. The painting (93 by 120 centimeters) was by Georges Rochegrosse, an artist greatly favored in the 1890s by the French bourgeoisie. Roche-grosse had enlivened the scene with a large number of nude women intended to illustrate vice and despair. It made 72,000 francs, probably one third the price it might have fetched last year, but still a satisfactory sum for the

The other big price-67,600 francs—was paid for a large com-position (135 by 272 centimeters) showing skaters at the Palais de Glace, Paris, in 1909. This work had the right touch of crazy baroque now needed to save kitsch at auction.

A picture (98 by 142 centimeters) by Georges Clairin showing the Napoleonic army in front of the Doge's Palace in Venice went for 13,080 francs, far below last year's level And it might not even have reached that figure had it not been for the Italian dealers at the sale. Two military scenes by Guido Sigriste, a Swiss painter of the same period whose brushwork is better than that of most kitsch artists, made a feeble 1,508 francs. Yet there is an exput on the block. Ofsire was a Swiss who, under the combined influence of Matisse and Modi-gliani, evolved a highly personal style with a sophisticated yet nati-flavor. A series of five crayon studies, all showing the artist: consummate draftsmanship, included an interesting sketch (3) by 23 centimeters) of a little girl and her doll. It sold for 82 francs A harbor scene (26 by 29 centime ters) went for 128 francs.

NEW YORK (NYT).—The history of modern sculpture has never been as fully explored or as extensively documented as that of modern painting. Although the situation is now changing there are still immense gaps in public understanding of exactly what it was that certain sculptors did, and exactly when they did it, and with exactly what artistic consequences. The sculptors in question are not; moreover, obscure or marginal figures. Some of them are the major artists of the modern Exacerbating this inexact understanding is the problematical fate that has overtaken the work of many of these sculptors after their death. It is common practice for a sculptor's heirs or agents to authorize posthumous casts and/or enlargements of his work. In many cases, the work we see in the museums or illustrated in the standard histories is an object the artist himself never laid eyes on, and certainly had no direct hand in producing. It is, in the strictest sense, a reproduction, and whether this reproduction — in bronze, stee! stone or other materials—can legitimately be regarded as a faithful reflection of the artist's actual achievement is suddenly looming as a subject of intense concern to scholars, dealers, museum curators, collectors and the sculptors themselves.

Consider the following examples:

e Imperto Boccioni died in 1918. His "Unique Forms of Continuity in Space"-perhaps the single most renowned sculpture in the history of futurism-is nally dated 1913. But the work that we see was cast in bronze in 1931, and the original plaster is lost. In what sense, then, can this positiumously produced re-production be regarded as Boccioni's own work?

• Raymond Duchamp - Villo. also died in 1918. The "Horse that we see in a number of museums and private collections is widely regarded as one of the classics of cubist sculpture. It bears the date 1914. What Du-chemp-Villon left (possibly unfinished) at the time of his death, however, was not the bronze version we see in three different sizes (the latest and largest of them 60 inches high revolving on a motorized base) but a rough 16-inch plaster. Are we guilty of distorting not only Duchamp - Villon's achievement but the whole history of cubist sculpture in accepting these posthumous enlargements as legit-imate examples of the artist's

Such cases of posthumous meddling with a sculptor's work are legion. Almost all of the sculpture of Degas that survives—and a sizable quantity of Rodin's too was cast in bronze after their deaths. Nor is the practice of authorizing these reproductions always posthumous. Prof. Albert E. Elsen, in the preface to his recent book, "Origins of Modern Sculpture: Pioneers and Premises (Braziller, 1974), writes: "Some of Van Tongerloo's early works have recently appeared in new editions, and the original plaster form of Construction in a Sphere' of 1917 was cut in marble in 1965, shortly before the artist's death. Max Weber'e few small plasters had a limited audience for most of his lifetime, and his 'Spiral Rhythm' was enlarged and cast in bronze before his death."

Clearly, the question of what is to be considered historically and utistically subjectic in modern culpture, and what is not, is mickly becoming a nightmare for everyone concerned, and the nightmare is further compounded by the phenomenon known as surmoulage—casting new copies from existing casts—which is widespread among unscrupulous whethere whose appetite for an easy, unethical profit is somewhat larger than their respect for the artistic integrity of the work they have acquired. These pirated casts are bound to be inferior in quality to casts supervised and improved by the artist himself, and in many cases are little more than grotesque parodies of the sculptor's art But taste and cupidity being what -- : they are, it is not surprising to ..... learn that the traffic in thest. bastard casts is brisk, Roseline Granet, Galerie Darthes Speyer, 6 Rue Jacques Callot, Paris 6, to Dec. 6.

Walking through the gardens f the Louvre, I happened to think how few contemporary works are really capable of fitting into a setting of trees and shrubs. Roseline Granet's large sculptures have that quality of intimate outdoor monumentality, partly, perhaps, (but not only) because she uses moldings of real leaves to while not unmodern, has a certain late romantic mood to itthe dreaminess, the leaf and water world, the aura of memory and regret that is reminiscent of. say, "Le Grand Meaulnes." Plaubert, Galerie Albert Verbeke, 7 Place Furstenberg, Paris 6. to Nov. 24.

Plaubert explores the aesthetics of grainy matter, sand and gravel, used as a medium for painting. I use the word "aesthetics" because, while such considerations are not absent from the works of a Braque or a Taptes, Piau-bert, in his informal obstractions, seems much more to let himself be governed by the charms of the material. This sometimes weakens his art, allowing it to become decorative when it holds a hetter promise.

U.S. Oil Study — A Futile Exercise

WARHINGTON, Nov. 8 (AP-DJ).—In its unan excuse for avoiding hard decisions the govertain search for national energy policy, the erument should have made months ago. certain search for national energy policy, the U.S. government is about to pass another dubious milestone as the release of a massive document optimistically known as the Project Indenendance hipeprint.

Even before the study was begun the authors knew it could not be the plan for total independence from foreign oil by 1980 that President Nixon promised during the Arab oil embargo.

Indeed, rather than providing a "blueprint," the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) will only offer "options" generally directed at achieving greater oil autonomy by 85. But there is a more basic reservation; Was the massive analysis necessary in the first place?

Probably a Dust Collector

Certainly President Ford's dumping of FEA chief John Sawhill increases the likelihood that the agency's findings will and up collecting dust. not influencing policy. Even before he was fired, Mr. Sawhill heard Interior Secretary Rogers Morton downgrading the Project Independence study as "some fancy footwork with computers." Since then, as head of the White House Energy Council, Mr. Morton has made clear the administration's distaste for the mandatory conservation options emphasized in the study and urged so outspokenly by Mr. Sawhill that it cost him his job.

The Sawhill episode is only the latest example of energy-policy intrigues that have reached almost Balkan proportions here over the past two years. The unending rivalries among policymakers, in fact, only add to the suspicion that the Project Independence binerrint has become

No one had to wait for the FEA conclusion that long-term storage of crude oil offers useful, though costly, insurance against another embargo. It has been generally agreed for some time, too, that shale oil and other "synthetic" crudes are not likely to attract the billions of dollars needed for even a few commercial-scale plants unless investors have some kind of price guarantee against foreign oil competition.

And it became clear last spring that the environmental impasse blocking the coal-for-oil switch at man; power plants probably will not end without special aid to utilities, perhaps faster tax writeoffs for sulphur-control devices. The Nixon and Ford administrations "have been spinning their wheels for 18 months" on energy questions, initially due to Mr. Nixon's preoccupation with Watergate, and then because of Mr. Ford's transition and political problems, adds an impatient petroleum-company executive

The FEA document cannot be dismissed as wholly sterile, however. It represents the first government attempt to project the impact of sharply higher petroleum prices on long-range energy supply and demand.

The study also explores for the first time the regional effects of fuel production and use. Not surprisingly, it finds that oil demand in the next 10 years will be heaviest in the Eastern states, while any new domestic supplies mostly will be drawn from Aisska. But it concludes that the usefalness of Alaskan oil could be lessened by the high cost of a second trans-Alaskan pipeline and the additional tankers needed to transport it.

U.K. Reserves View on Barents Sea Claim

Norway Seen Among Top 10 Oil Exporters

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (UPD .-Norway's minister for sea matters said today off-shore deposits would make his country one of the world's 10 largest oil and gas exporters in five years.

The potential of this continental shell is enormous," said Minister Jans Evensen in outlining Norway's North Sea dis-efficient bee pollination-wherenpon Wisconsin cranherry growers rushed out and rented 2,000 bee colonies and increased the cash value of their crop by $4 million. (Rental fees since have doubled to $30 per colony currently.)

An even more dramatic and significant breakthrough may lie in the potential effect of bee pollination on soybeans, the country's second most important feed crop and critical source of protein. Some observers expect a new hybrid soybean that would double present yields to be in common use in several years. Unlike present varieties, however, the new hybrid will require honeybees for pollination. With all-out production, about two million colonies of bees half of the country's present total would be required.

In a way, it is surprising that honeybees are declining in numbers because they in effect have been a protected species for years. But the economics of beekeroing have taken a turn for the worse in the last 10 years or so. Changed farming practices (such as using chemicals for fertilizers instead of plowed-under legumes, which while in blossom are excellent sources of nectar) and the continuing spread of suburble into what used to be open fields have

Saudis to Sell Crude Oil to West Germans

DUSSELDORF, Nov. 8 (AP-DJ) .-- Vebs AG said today that it plans to sign shortly a contract to purchase about 12 million tons of crude oll over the next three years from Saudi Arabia.

The company, which is 40per-cent owned by the federal government, said it would pay an undisclosed amount of cash for the petroleum.

The forthcoming contract was announced following the return from Saudi Arabia last night of a West German delegation heeded by Economics Minister Hans Fridsrichs and including Rudolf von Benningsen-Foerder, Veba. management board chairman.

Bank Loans Rise in U.S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (UPI).-In a dramatic swing that surprised the money market, the Federal Reserve reported yester-day that New York bank business loans increased sharply and that the money supply shrank for the second straight week.

The report came when money market analysts expected loan de-mand to remain softer and money to begin growing faster. Instead, the money supply for the week ended Oct. 30 averaged $280 billion down from $284.2 billion two weeks earlier and back to its June level.

York Federal Reserve Bank showed a total increase of $510 billion in commercial and industrial loans in the week ended Wednesday, the largest jump in such bor-rowing since the record $1.17-billion expansion recorded in the week ended July 3. The average interest rate on loans of federal funds, which are reserves that banks lend to each other, inched down 9 basis points (or hundredths of a percentage point) to 9.63 per cent, the lowest level since March 27,

Claims on Sea

LONDON, Nov. 8 (Reuters). Britain has told Norway that it has not yet formed an opinion on Norway's claim to a continental shelf stretching up to 1,000 kilometers beneath the Barents Sea, British officials said today. They had been asked to comment on a press report from Oslo that, in a move which could herald a great-power controversy about fishery and oil-drilling rights in Arctic waters, Britain has told Norway it did not necessarily eccept the Norwegian view that the sea area around Spitzbergen was part of Norway's continental shelf.

The officials said: "We have informed Norway that we have not yet formed an opinion about their view of the Spitzbergen continental shelf and we reserve the right to do so."

The Norwegian view is that the vast area between Norway and Spitzbergen to the north-where the shelf has its greatest width of more than 1,000 kilometers—is part of Norway's continental shelf in line with the Geneva Law of the Sea convention of 1958.

The new members are expected to be Spain, Sweden, Switzerland. Austria and Turkey. Members already pledged are the United States, Canada, Japan, Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, Ireland and Luxembourg.

Nippon Steel Corp. said today gross sales in the six months ended Sept. 30 were a record 1,118.9 billion yen ($37.3 billion) compared with 878 billion yen a year earlier but sharp rises in raw material and labor costs nearly halved net profit to 13.01 billion yen from 23.03 billion yen,

Vice-president Takeo Fujiki attributed the record sales chiefly to product price increases. How-ever, these were unable to absorb cost increases of 12,900 yen per ton of steel, including about 9,000 yen for raw materials, in domestic and export markets.

Mr. Pujiki said it is difficult forecast results for the current term in view of domestic market uncertainties, signs of slow exports after January, a coking coal shortage, the possible strike by U.S. coal miners and anticipated higher from ore prices.

Overall market weakness appeared to reflect disappointment over the sharp rise in business loans at major New York banks in the latest week, and concern about inflation, compounded by further reductions in U.S. grain crop estimates by the Department of Agriculture.

The agency also reported soy-bean production would be 1.24 billion bushels, down 18 million bushels, or 1 per cent, from last month's estimate and 323 million bushels below last year's crop.

Nor was I riveted to "Tattoo" simply because Mr. Thompson continues to gamble on writing scenes that most writers would shy away from: scenes like the one in which Jack drops in one night on a sex-hungry old woman who lives next door, only to find her butchered on her living-room floor, with her pet cats lapping up her blood; or the one in which a squad of Navy recruits decide to beat op one fat old prostitute, or the one in which Jack, while stationed on postwar Okinawa, pays a bounty to go "Jap-hunting" and proudly wins a skull for a souvenir. After all, it is not the mere presence of such violence and sexuality that makes a fiction compelling; it is what the author does with them.

Nor can I attribute my interest in "Tattoo" purely to Mr. Thompson's gift for storytelling—his ability to write the fight scenes between Jack and his cronies so as to make the reader's palms damp with sweat, and the love scenes between Jack and his dozens of women so as to inspire laughter or terror as the encounters move him; his success in having set his hero up and knocked him down repeatedly without ever alienating the reader's hopes for him, or his uncanny knack for paloting the seamlest side of a flat Midwestern social milien and making it seem as vital and animated as a Bruegel village scene (and as joyously obscene).

It can't be storytelling alone that held me, because when I stop and consider Mr. Thompson's craft carefully, I realize it is actually rather crude. Come to think of it, he telegraphs his punches pages before they come: he relies far too heavily on a single device of scene shifting (the reviewer for The New York Times, WHY did I keep plowing on through Earl Thompson's secintervening events with new exposition), and he frequently turns out prose that never seems to have gotten the benefits of polishing ("Then he ran the holst back up as Tompkins' taxi wobbled away, him urging the young man. at the stern sweep to greater speed").

Everest 115 Farmer abbr.

No, for all Mr. Thompson's considerable talent, it was not his narrative power, his raw material or the fascination of his earlier book that drew me so willingly through "Tattoo." What is even more interesting. I think. is Mr. Thompson's visible struggle to transmit his raw material into

It is pretty obvious that the author is writing his own life story. Not only does his biography seem closely to approximate his hero's, but he also has a tendency to use the third-person singular point of view as if it were an extension of Jack's fantasies, and there are any number of incidents in the story that have so little thematic connection to the book that one is forced to conclude that they are includ-ed because they actually hap-

On the other hand, Mr. Thomp-son's determination to forge res-onant symbols out of his experience is also evident on almost. every page. It is apparent in the grandfather's contrapuntal venting of spleen against the system that has kept himself, his family and his social class down. It is evident in Jack's growing belief that no matter how hard he fights to improve himself, he is forever stamped by his origins, by his blood even, and condemned to remain an odd man out. And it is manifest in the novel's title, "Tattoo," which refers both to the drumbeat of reality that calls Jack back into the armed service the only milieu in which he can find a niche) and to the indelible pattern that is needled on his

I don't think Mr. Thompson finally wins his struggle. The raw, undigested quality of his material overwhelms what is patterned and universal in his novel.
One thinks of Thomas Wolfe forever losing out to his compulsion to say absolutely everything.) But the raw material is deeply powerful: the art is effective as far as it goes, and the tension between the two is interesting enough to make one hope that Mr. Thompson goes on living as recklessly as he has up until now, and continues to put his life into novels.

NEW YORK, Nov. B (UPI).—The Memphis Southmen are so dominant in the World Football League that last night they inserted an offensive guard at fullback and he scored a touchdown against the Chicago Fire in a 49-24 rout.

The Southmen have had problems at fullback since Willie Spencer, their 20-year-old rookie, suffered a knee injury three weeks ago and was lost for the season. Memphis led by 17 points with minutes to play when offensive guard Bracy Bomham got a chance to play fullback against Chicago. ## NBA's Clubowners Make Landmark Decision

FAVORED FILLY—Dahlia (right), who is being picked to win the Washington, D.C., International again on

. By Dave Anderson

NEW YORK, NOV. 8 (NYT).-Not long after Simon Gourdine joined the National Basketball Association as an aide to Com-missioner Walter Kennedy four years ago, they were attempting to unwind in their offices from another full-court press by one of their contentious clubowners.

"You look tired." Gourdine said. "I don't know how much more of this I can take," the commissioner replied.

"But you enjoy it," Gourdine

"I do," Kennedy agreed, "but I'm reaching the point where it's beginning to affect my health. Play your card right and you might have my job someday." "I'd love that," Gourdine said.

"Are you kidding?" Kennedy "Not at all," Gourding said, "I don't mean tomorrow or the next day, but maybe someday."

'Maybe someday," Kennedy said. Simon Gourdine got closer to someday yesterday. In a vote of the clubowners, who traditionally can't agree on whether the sun is shining, he was selected unanimously as the deputy commis-sioner, the first time the NBA has knighted anyone with that title. It doesn't mean that he automatically will succeed Kennedy when the commissioner's resignation takes effect June 1, but it does mean that the 34-year-old attorney is now the most obvious potential successor. It also means, according to the NBA constitution that "on the resignation, incapacity, absence or death of the commissioner, the deputy commissioner shall assume the Cuties of the commissioner and all his rights and powers and contime as such until the return of the commissioner or until a new commissioner is elected." If the clubowners don't select someone else as Kennedy's successor by June 1, then Gourdine is the commissioner until they choose some-

One other thing. Gourdine is black. He is the first black deputy commissioner in major league sports. But he would prefer to be thought of as just the first Simon.

"I don't think being black has helped me as much as some people think it has," he says, "Some people think that just because so many players and so many coaches are black, a black commissioner would be important. But the coaches and the players just want you to be fair. There's a certain kinship between blacks, just as there's a kinship between the Irish or between the Italians. but I remember the first time I dealt with a players' association committee, Oscar Robertson was on it. He was glad to see me but than it was time to get on with it. Players, black or white, just want you to be fair." Owners, black or white, also want him to be fair. "I like to think I have been fair," he says. "T've made recommendations to the commissioner that went against certain owners one time, and that were in their favor another time. That's what the merits of those cases called for. I want the owners to say. All right, I lost that one but, if the merits are on my side, I'll win the next one. The only way to command respect is to be evenhanded in every case. To be fair."

He learned to be fair as one of seven children of a laborer in a chemical plant.

"In a big family, when your father wasn't making much money, you had to be fair," he said. "You knew you couldn't take all the food on the platter. You knew you had to share. I think I really realized that when I went on to City College from Commerce High School, because I knew that my parents were making an economic sacrifice by letting me go to school instead of making me go out and get a job."

"President Ford's cabinet?"

"Why not? He blew the election for me with his pardon. The least he could do is give me a cabinet post." "But if he gave everyone who lost the election a high post in his administration, the President would have to hold his cabinet meetings in RFK Stadium."

"That's what my wife said." "Governor, by American stan-dards, you're a loser. You have tasted the bitter fruit of defeat. Having lived through it, would you advise young people to run for public office?"

"I certainly would." "Why?" "Because if you win, you have a chance of getting your own helicopter. There's nothing like it, son. You're flying way up there in the clouds and when you look down, all you see are suckers jammed bumper to bumper trying to get home from the football game."

Samuel Fuller-Hardboiled Romantic

PARIS (IBT).—Forget the tales of directors with strange clothes and curious habits. Hollywood's true eccentrics were not the splashy showoffs but the men who were ignored by front offices and who, truly off-center, just churned out their short, cheap, B pictures with minimal interference because they weren't important enough to interfere As a result they remained themselves and recently such men as Don Siegel, Budd Boetticher and Samuel Fuller have struck European (and, later, American) film buffs as amazingly individualistic and inventive film-makers. The ordinary film-goer may wonder what the fust is about, but to film buffs these men have a toughness, technical panache, feeling for action and a stub-born pioneering spirit that seems typically American. Ful-ler, for example, has been called "an authentic American primitive" and has been deemed "representative of the internal collapse of the American dream in the 20th century."

Fuller, who produced and wrote his films as well as directing and so was probably more immersed in his own vision than other B-film directors, is an especially cherished auteur these days. He has been the subject of countless homages and campus chats. He has been called the most anarchistic of American directors, has been found to be "one of the roots of the modern political cinema, and has been damned as a fascist. One critic has even studied the leg imagery of Puller's films:

"Fuller's visual fragmentation of character, the use of one physical part of a character as indicative of a whole, is most apparent in his current shots of legs and feet—a pattern that could be linked to his war experiences as an infantryman (i.e. foot soldier)."

Fuller's own response to the endless analysis is typically pungent: "It's very interesting and very immaterial, I'm happy if it gives a story." In Paris to accept homages from cinephiles on the opening of his latest film. "Dead Pigeon on Beethoven Street" in seven film houses, Fuller turns out to be short, boisterous, gravel-voiced, a winker, midger, chortler, cigar-waver who is about to become a father for the first time at 62 (his wife, whom he met through director Claude Chabrol, is German actress Christa Lang). Less important, he is about to make his first big-budget film for a top

American producer.

The producer is Al Ruddy, of "The Godfather," which Fuller hasn't seen. "A big-shot Amer-ican producer who likes me! Unbelievable." he says. "He called me, took me to Chow's for lunch. I've never had someone call me. I meet people who say let's make a picture, I say fine and get excited. They never show up with the money. I don't care. I go on to another one. That way I ac-cumulate a lot of script."

Fuller is constantly writing scripts: In his hotel room he is working on "The Big Red One," about the infantry division he fought with across Europe in World War II. He has said he became a director to "stop bananaheads from ruining my stories." The picture with Al Ruddy will, for the first time, be Big Star, which doesn't especially excite Fuller-in fact, he's rather sorry about the stars because they interfere with the schedule.

The film will be called "Battle Royal" and Fuller describes it as an international Watergate "The first battle royals were between gladiators, then between Negro slaves, then fighting cocks. Now we are in 1975 and we haven't progressed a goddam inch. That's number one. Country against country and no one knows who's the winner, and that's the story. Now this is good for your information, it really is hot! I have a meeting of statesmen in the film, I thought I could get the leading director of each nation to play a head of state. I have Bertolucci and Truffaut, I'm looking for German and British directors." Lots of Fuller projects don't come off; he has been sacked and discarded and has had some Hollywood-style upsets, as when he ended up producing "Park Row," a cherished project about Mergenthaler'e invention of a line-typesetting machine because the producers wanted to make it a musical with Greg-ory Peck, Mitzi Gaynor and Dan Dailey. He doesn't believe in contracts. "If things don't work out, you walk."

Fuller's hardboiled style makes some Europeans think him a cynic. In fact he is rather a romantic, as he suggested when he appeared in Godard's "Pierrot le Fou" and gave himself the line, "The film is like a battleground: love, hate, action, violence, death. In one word: emotion." Godard, says Fuller, told him he could go on at some length but Fuller settled for the one short phrase: "I didn't want to end up on some goddam cutting-room floor," he

Fuller says the man who helped him most in his early Hollywood days was Herbert Brenon: "He directed the original Beau Geste' and 'Peter Pan." The big influence, though, was his early career as a crime reporter for two big New York dailies. "Any newspaperman. hetween you and me, can direct. It's almost how you describe something if you're writing a story. Whatever you're writing, you're balancing things. His instinct for the odd and the blatant came from such early journalistic triumphs as discovering the body of actress Jeanne Eagels through a hunchback chum named Humpy who worked the backroom at Frank E. Campbell's funeral parlor and whom Fuller used to dine with at the Automat. He also

There is also the detail of in the picture and has him shot in the first scene, showing his body in the morgue with a tag on its big toe. "That's nothing—the morgue, the name tag," says Fuller. "But—and tag," says Fuller. "But-and for me this is good film-making-the number on the tag is the number of Johnson's rifle. When he sees that title number in Nashville . . ." Fuller breaks up with glee at the thought of Johnson's face. Of such jokes are theses on
